Herbal teas like moringa, ginger, hibiscus, licorice, and papaya leaf are commonly available as "cut and sifted" (C&S) ingredients, which refers to a coarse cut suitable for loose-leaf infusions or large tea bags.

Herbal teas, technically known as tisanes or herbal infusions, are beverages made from the infusion or decoction of various plant materials in water, and do not typically contain leaves from the Camellia sinensis tea plant (true tea). They are popular globally for their diverse flavors and health-promoting properties.
